

Cash for the Internet

Bitcoin is an alternative currency that can be transferred electronically anywhere in the world with no bank and no government forms. It's cheaper than any other online payment system, and thousands of websites already accept it.

The Bitcoin network uses state-of-the-art cryptography to provide superior privacy protection, making it difficult to confiscate by governments or other thieves, but accessible from any WiFi connection or mobile device.

Bitcoin does not discriminate. You can open a Bitcoin wallet without showing ID, or providing a physical address. Unlike traditional banks, Bitcoin is accessible to the undocumented, and the homeless, giving the unbanked a means of savings, and access to a vibrant global market.

Bitcoin is radically changing the economy from top to bottom. It is not tied to any central bank, so it is not subject to dollar inflation, which is at the root of systemic poverty and homelessness in any otherwise wealthy economy.

The global dollar hegemony now has serious competition, giving us an easy exit off the dollar's road to worthlessness.

The HONEY BADGER of money

This is Bitcoin. It's the most fearless currency on the Internet. Oh, Bitcoin is just crazy!

It's distributed all over the place. Watch out banks! Bitcoin does all the work. We don't need you anymore, Stupid!

Eew! Oh my gosh! Transactions are super fast. How disgusting is that? Bitcoin is so nasty.

Bitcoin has no regard for any national borders anywhere, allowing it to move about freely.

Here comes a fierce battle between the State and Bitcoin. FYI. It's got encryption! Nothing can stop Bitcoin.

Now the Feds want to tax Bitcoin. Do you think Bitcoin cares? Bitcoin don't give a Bit! It just does what it wants.
